

Back Home Again in Indiana

Join us for our 10th annual Conservation in Action Tour, right back where it all started. We'll see how far conservation farming has progressed in the past decade—new systems, new partnerships and new understanding of the benefits of healthy soils and healthy farms—and how CTIC has been there all along the way.

We'll dig into new premium market opportunities that extend the benefits of conservation from the farm all the way through the supply chain. We'll explore how watershed projects engage ag retailers and agribusiness, and how Indiana's agencies and farm organizations work in partnership, building bridges to the future.

All that at conservation farming's #1 opportunity for demonstrations, insight and networking!

The Conservation Technology Information Center (CTIC) is a national, public-private partnership that champions conservation agriculture and serves as a clearinghouse for information on conservation farming issues and practices, as well as a facilitator for training and workshops.
